EDUCATORS LET CONTRACTS FOR SCHOOL BUILDING

Columbus Firms Granted All of Work After Bids Are Studied

JOBS TO START BY JAN. 11

Trapp-Carroll Co.'s Offer of $62,575 Accepted

The Circleville Board of Education awarded the general contract for construction of the new addition to the high school and Corwin street buildings, Wednesday night, to the Trapp-Carroll Co., Columbus.

An adjourned meeting was held in the law office of Charles H. May, president of the board, for consideration of the bids.

The firm's original bid was $66,950 but the board took alternates reducing the contract to $62,575. Walls will not be painted making a reduction of $1,250. The board eliminated a proposed sidewalk along the front of the addition to Corwin street saving $500. They substituted composition tile for maple flooring in the classrooms with a saving of $1,400, and $525 for bookshelves was eliminated.

The back-filling brick will be second grade resulting in a $700 saving.

Work to start by Jan. 11. Work will be started on the addition before Jan. 11, the deadline set by PWA when a grant of $36,900 was made.

Ten bids were submitted for the general contract.

The Handley Plumbing Co., Columbus, was awarded the plumbing and sewer contract on a bid of $4,329. Contract for electrical work was awarded the Hollis Electrical Co., Columbus. The firm's bid was $4,894.43. Only bidder on the heating and ventilating system was the Columbus Heating and Ventilating Co., whose bid was $6,490.

Thirty-one bids including all work in connection with the new addition were submitted to the board Monday afternoon. Bids for equipment will be considered at a later date.

WILSON CHOSEN NEW CHIEF OF SECRET SERVICE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—(UP)—Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., today announced appointment of Frank Wilson as new chief of the United States secret service.

He succeeds William H. Moran, who retires at midnight after 50 years in the government service. The secretary announced that Joseph E. Murphy will be assistant chief.

Wilson has been acting chief of the secret service since September 8 when he was transferred from the position of special agent in charge of the Cleveland office of the internal revenue bureau's intelligence unit.

DAVEY REFUSES TO SIGN ACT TO HALT APPRAISAL

COLUMBUS, Dec. 31.—(UP)—Governor Davey today vetoed a bill designed to delay re-appraisal of real estate due in all Ohio counties next year.

Under provisions of the bill the state tax commission was empowered to order delays in the re-appraisals on application of county auditors.

The governor approved the five bills comprising the administration's tax program, including the sales tax, liquid fuel, cigarettes, use, and admissions taxes. These bills will raise $66,000,000 a year.

KIDNAP THREATS AGAINST JANE WITHERS 'NEWS'

BOSTON, Dec. 31.—(UP)—Reported kidnap threats against Jane Withers, juvenile screen star, were "news" to the New England division of the justice department's investigation bureau today.

The bureau denied it had been asked to guard the child, who arrived here yesterday with her mother, Mrs. Ruth Withers, preparatory to opening a week's engagement at a local theater Friday—the first appearance on a national tour.

"We received two letters in Los Angeles six weeks ago," Mrs. Withers told the United Press, "but this is the first time it has been made public."

"This letter also contained a threat to take her for a ride," Mrs. Withers said. "The second letter said to send the money in $5, $10 and $20 denominations of old bills and to await instructions. Both letters were signed 'The Four Aces'."

NATION TO SPEND 10 MILLIONS AS NEW YEAR COMES

BY UNITED PRESS
America will open its pocket-books tonight with a prosperity flourish to greet the new year with as lavish a display as it has seen since the 1920s.

New Yorkers will spend 10 million dollars, Kansas City elite will dine on imported English pheasant, Lexington, Ky., will give a birthday party for a horse.

A survey by the United Press showed that from coast to coast more money will jingle over the counters of night clubs, liquor stores and hotels than at any time since the depression sobered would-be celebrants.

New York topped the list with an estimated outlay of $10,000,000 for celebrations in hotels, night clubs, and homes. Philadelphia figured $7,000,000, Chicago perhaps $4,000,000.

Los Angeles and Hollywood expected Rose Bowl football game customers to contribute their share to a New Year's eve purse approaching $1,500,000. A half million celebrants will usher the new year in around the movie colony.

AUTOIST FINED $25, COSTS FOR LAW VIOLATION

George Kline, 20, of near Yellowwood, was fined $25 and costs Wednesday afternoon by Mayor W. J. Graham on a charge of failure to stop and disclose his identity at the scene of an accident.

Kline paid the costs and made arrangements to settle his fine.

Mayor Graham said Kline had posted $100 bond Monday to appear at a later date for a hearing. He reported back in police court Wednesday afternoon and after hearing evidence the mayor found him guilty.

The charge grew out of a traffic accident on S. Court street on Dec. 12 when Harry Grant, 26, negro, of 820 Maplewood avenue, suffered cuts and bruises when hit by an auto while crossing the street.

FEAR FOR LIVES OF 30 ABOARD MISSING YACHT

Col. Fleischmann's Million Dollar Haida Disabled Before Hurricane

RADIO CALLS UNANSWERED

Rich Californian, Guests and Crew in Danger

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 31.—(UP)—Fear for the safety of 30 persons aboard the $1,000,000 yacht Haida, owned by Col. Max Fleischmann, millionaire sportsman of the yeast manufacturing family, mounted today when coast guard radio operators were unable to contact the vessel. It was known to have engine trouble and a hurricane was reported bearing down on the area from which it last reported.

Colonel Fleischmann, his wife, five guests and a crew of 23 are aboard.

The guests are Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Yule of Santa Barbara; Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Wyburn and Dr. Hart of San Francisco. Yule is a capitalist and his wife is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Raymond of Akron, Ohio, and Montecito.

Message to Banker

The last message from the yacht, sent to Arthur Ogilvy, Santa Barbara banker yesterday, and intercepted by the coast guard station, said one of the Haida's twin diesel engines had broken down and that speed had been reduced to five knots an hour. Under normal circumstances the trim 218-foot cruiser, can make 23 knots.

The Ogilvy message said a head blow off one of the engines. Heavy seas, running ahead of the hurricane winds, already were making the going difficult off the Mexican coast.

When the government radio operator tried to contact the Haida today there was no answer, although the vessel is equipped with the most modern radio.

SPANISH REFUSE TO FREE CARGO OF GERMAN SHIP

MADRID, Dec. 31.—(UP)—The Basque government has refused a German warship demand for release of the cargo of the German steamship Palos, seized off Bilbao and subsequently freed.

With the complete approval of the Madrid government, the Basque government informed the command of the German cruiser Koenigsberg, who made the demand, that the question of releasing the Palos's cargo, alleged to include materials of war, must be decided by the international committee on non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

An official statement by the Basque government on the Palos incident was released here today as follows:

"The Basque provinces government has been informed of the handling of the Palos incident by its defense council and has made evident its clear approval of the steps taken by the council, in absolute conformity with international law."

CHURCH SECURES NOTE

Officers of the Churches of Christ in Christian Union were granted authority by Common Pleas Judge J. W. Adkins Thursday to encumber real estate to secure an $18,000 note at a local bank.

OHIO OFFICIALS TO TAKE OATHS FROM WEYGANDT

COLUMBUS, Dec. 31.—(UP)—Two new state officials will take the oath of office here today.

Secretary of State George S. Meyers, elected to a six year term on the supreme court bench, will take his oath before Chief Justice Carl V. Weygandt.

Meyers' successor, W. J. Kennedy, will also take his oath today. Meyers, upon qualifying as a jurist of the state's highest tribunal, will administer the ceremonial for his successor, according to plans.

Kennedy's regular term does not begin until Jan. 11 but was appointed by the governor to fill the unexpired term.

F. D. R. BELIEVED READY TO ASK DEFENSE MONEY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—(UP)—President Roosevelt was believed today to have prepared a $1,000,000,000 national defense recommendation in his budget which will be submitted next week to congress.

The cost of national defense and vitally related but non-military war department expenditures has approximated that figure for two consecutive years. The president has explained in each instance that the precarious world situation required adequate preparation for defense as well as determined efforts to maintain peace.

Three days before submitting national defense budget estimates last year, Mr. Roosevelt delivered his annual message to congress. It dealt at length with threats to peace and challenged any international disturber to "fit this shoe to its foot." The president referred to the time when "petty kings and feudal barons" or "great emperors and great kings" were remaking Europe's map or scrambling for colonial empire.

CO-ED MISSING SEVERAL DAYS IN MICHIGAN

DETROIT, Dec. 31.—(UP)—Mystery surrounded the whereabouts of attractive Lillian Marie Platte, University of Michigan co-ed, as police continued their search today.

The 20-year-old daughter of a prominent Detroit family has been missing since she left home Tuesday morning in the family automobile, ostensibly for a shopping trip and to see a movie.

Police were not called into the case until yesterday when the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter J. Platte, became alarmed after Lillian failed to return.

A hurried check of downtown department stores and parking lots disclosed that the girl had not made any purchases on the family account and that she did not park her automobile in the customary places.

Italian Baron, Visiting At Criswell Home, Sees War, Silent About Il Duce

By FRANKLIN KIBLER
Circleville has a real Italian nobleman—not for keeps, just on a visit.

Baron Giorgio Suriani di Castelnuovo of New York City, founder and president of the Noblemen's Club, clearing house for titles, arrived here Wednesday as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Criswell, S. Court street.

He has written an article, "The Involence of American Women," for the new magazine "Bachelor" to be published in February by Mrs. Criswell, whose pen name is Miss Franchon Devoe. The article is described by Mrs. Criswell as a "criticism of why American women fail as wives of foreign noblemen."

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 31.—(UP)—A source close to the Mattson family told the United Press today that Dr. William Mattson has paid the $28,000 ransom for the return of his kidnapped son, Charles, 10, the source said the family expected the boy to be returned home shortly.

Payment of the ransom was not confirmed immediately from official sources.

It was not learned whether Dr. Mattson dealt directly with the kidnaper who carried Charles from the Mattson home Sunday night, or acted through an intermediary, but it seemed certain the money had been paid.

The Mattson reportedly changed hands either late last night or early today.

7,000 MORE MEN PUT OUT OF JOBS IN AUTO STRIKE

DETROIT, Dec. 31.—(UP)—Automobile workers, threatening to extend "sit-down" strikes, awaited a reply today to their fourth request for a "satisfactory and permanent settlement" of labor's demands on General Motors for collective bargaining rights among its 211,000 workers.

The sit-down strike of 1,200 workers in Fisher Body plant No. 2, a General Motors unit, in Flint, Mich., spread today to plant No. 1 employing 7,000 men and women. Night shift employees of plant No. 1 which has been considered a "hot spot", sat down at 10 p. m., the workers refusing to return to their tasks after the lunch period.

Fisher Body company officials immediately ordered the plant closed and ordered that the day crew be refused admittance when it reported.

The output of plant No. 1 consists of bodies for Buick and other divisions of that G. M. division predicted that it will be able to continue operation for only a day or less before the supply of bodies is exhausted.

Cardinals Say Special Prayer For Pope Pius

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 31.—(UP)—Special prayers in which 16 cardinals participated were offered for Pope Pius's recovery today at the Basilica of St. John in Lateran, "the Cathedral of Rome."

The prayers were offered on the occasion of a service commemorating the 1600th anniversary of the death of the Pope, St. Sylvester I.

The pope's sister, his sister-in-law, his nephew, Count Ratti, members of the diplomatic corps, representatives of King Victor Emmanuel and the Italian foreign office and provincial and other authorities attended the service.

Cardinal Marchetti - Selvaggi, vicar general of Rome, celebrated mass, assisted by the other cardinals. After the mass the Sistine choir sang music arranged by Maestro Lorenzo Perosi, "Oremus Pro Papa," the prayer always offered for the pope. Then there was a special prayer for the health of the pope, for the prosperity of the Roman Catholic church and for world peace.

At the Vatican, it was said that the pope passed his most comfortable night in 10 days and that he maintained the improvement noted yesterday. Partial relief of the pain in his left leg, swelled by varicose veins, continued, it was said.

Cardinal Pacelli, Vatican secretary of state, visited the pope this morning to discuss urgent matters and said afterward that the pope's condition was satisfactory.

Vatican City officials again today expressed their indignation at what they called false reports published abroad about the pope's illness. They insisted that his condition continued to improve.

Influenza in Chicago Area Believed Halted by Drop

Residents shed their overcoats and opened doors and windows Wednesday when the temperature went to 64 degrees, the warmest Dec. 30 in local weather history. During the night the mercury dropped to 32 degrees accompanied by rain-fall of .4 of an inch.

BY UNITED PRESS

Winter delivered an old-fashioned freezing spell today to greet the new year.

Frigid winds surged westward the northeastern fourth of the United States to end a year marked by record cold waves and drought and climaxed by the dizziest display of all.

First severe drops in temperature last night ended in a day in which some cities sweltered in near-Indian summer temperatures, while others a few hundred miles away dug out of six inches of snow.

"Much Colder," Report

Government forecasters predicted "much colder" weather today and tonight in New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri and Minnesota, and continued cold in the Dakotas and Nebraska, Kansas and New Jersey may have more warm weather.

There will not be much snow on traffic to increase the always-severe traffic hazards of New Year's eve, the forecasters said.

Chicagoans set aside their topcoats and got out their overcoats again after three days of record-high temperatures. The thermometer shot to 60 degrees in Chicago yesterday, and set high temperatures in Indiana, Missouri, Iowa and other parts of Illinois. In Minot, N. D., it was 20 degrees below zero.

A sleet storm wrecked electric connections in 13 Dakota communities, stopped street cars in Omaha, Neb., and caused heavy damage in parts of Minnesota.

A tornado caused $50,000 property damage near Cumberland, Ia., and high winds damaged communications near Canton, Ill.

Plane Helps Rescue

An airplane dropped flares to guide boats through ice floes on Lake Monona, in Madison, Wis., to rescue Jack Woodward and Robert Waicki, marooned in a leaky boat.

Seasonable cold will prevail in the midwest and east at least through Friday, forecasters said.

CITY OBSERVES NEW YEAR WITH MANY PARTIES

Circleville will greet the new year in a variety of ways Thursday evening, with the celebration extending into the early hours of the next morning.

A watch party is being conducted at Trinity Lutheran church under the auspices of the Luther league. It will be held in the parish house from 8 until 11:30 p. m., with a program and refreshments, after which a 30-minute church service will be held.

A similar entertainment will be held at the United Brethren church.

Many private watch parties will be held with the Pickaway Country club to be the scene of a gathering of about 50 persons.

The Elks' dance, starting at 11 o'clock, is expected to draw a capacity crowd.

State enforcement officers have been instructed to "beat down" on such violations regardless of the holidays, department officials said.

DIET AND HEALTH

Human Hair in History, Medicine and Culture

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
 WHETHER consciously or unconsciously, most of us notice the hair more than any other feature of the body. A stranger appeals to us immediately on the basis of his hair.

Dr. Clendening

It is said that race, climate and nutrition are the factors primarily responsible for the appearance of a human being's hair. I would add heredity.

The color of hair, of course, is largely racial and climatic. Blondes and redheads are rare at the Equator and common at the Poles.

Diseases are associated with peculiar hairs. Light hair, for those with a tendency to tuberculosis. Schrodde's cancer hair is coarse dark hair which grows in localized spots in an individual with cancer.

Although man is generally considered to be a hairless animal, there is no part of the body, except the red of the lips and the eyelids, in which hair does not grow. A man sheds hair just like an animal. Thirty hairs a day is the normal shedding rate or fur change of homo sapiens.

Hair is just as individual as thumb prints. For criminal purposes a person may be immediately identified by his hair. In 1836, in a small French village, several people were murdered and four suspects were arrested. In the home of one of these suspects an axe showing traces of blood was found. There were five hairs on the axe, and the microscopic examination proved that the suspect, a butcher, was innocent of the crime. The hair was not that of any of the murdered individuals.

Whether the hair turns gray in a single night is to be doubted, although Marie Antoinette's case has much evidence. Maximilian I is said to have turned gray in one night. While he was climbing in the mountains in the Tyrol, he spent a whole night hanging from a rock before he was saved.

The hair has many ceremonial implications in different countries. The Manchus forced the Chinese to wear a cue as a token of submission. After the revolution in 1911 all the cues were cut off to show that the Manchus were no longer supreme.

Early growth of the beard in youth is celebrated by some nations. In China, the juvenile beard is shaved for the first time in public.

FEAR AND CONFIDENCE

THE improvement in business which has taken place during 1936 probably owes much to reviving confidence, and to the lessening fears for the financial and commercial future.

Some people are disposed to look at such fears, and the effect of "confidence" on business, as largely imaginary. If people have money, they buy goods; and if they haven't, they don't buy, it is argued.

The doctors say that mental states influence the human body, and they also modify human action. If a man is sick, and thinks he isn't going to get well, he is apt to sink rapidly. But if he feels he is going to recover, his chances are greatly improved.

It is very much so in business. If people fear the future, they hang on to every dollar. If they have confidence in the future, they spend rather freely.

The "profit motive" in business is viewed with alarm by many. They argue that it makes people grasping and selfish. But unless we are going to communism, we have to depend on the profit motive to induce people to do business and employ labor. If there is no chance of making money, there is no inducement to do business under our present system. If the chances of profits look good, there will be work for the unemployed.

WRITE IT DOWN

WRITING demands that one think clearly, and very often one can think out a problem on paper better than in one's head.

Some time where you have a particularly knotting problem to solve, analyze it on a piece of paper.

If you are puzzling over whether to buy a new piece of machinery, for instance, write down in one list all the good things that can be said for the deal, and on the other side all the bad things that can be said against it.

This will often clarify your mind and enable you to make a decision easily.

Old Ben Franklin was a great man for writing things down, and some of the best things he has left us were little things he wrote down for his own personal guidance with no thought of handing them on to any one else.

THE HELPLESS DRIVER

A CURRENT joke has it that the traffic officer told the lady who was having trouble with her car to "use her noodle." But she asked where the noodle was, as she had pushed and pulled everything in the car.

Unfamiliarity with the complicated mechanism of an automobile is not limited to the female sex. Three quarters of the men are equally helpless when anything goes wrong. As one of them remarked: "All I know is how to step on the gas and turn

NRA PLANNERS IN CIRCUS

WASHINGTON—The movement to devise a plan for a new NRA has developed into a hilarious three-ring circus. In one arena is Uncle Dan Roper, herding a troop of big shot industrialists who perform under the sonorous billing: The Business Advisory Council. The Council has no official standing, is merely a personal creation of Uncle Dan to enable him to pose in the limelight as a weighty New Deal figure. The deliberations of the Council are secret and its findings vague and innocuous.

A second arena is occupied by Major George Berry, engaged in the dizzy feat of trying to marshal a band of laborites and smaller business men into some semblance of unity and coherence. Berry's performers also have a high-sounding title, The Council of Industrial Progress. It has a quasi-official status and its sessions are open. But its results are no more significant than that of its rival "artists," who, incidentally, view the Berryites with superior disdain.

In the third arena is Madame Secretary Frances Perkins. The Labor Department boss is a new-comer in the show. Her first performance took place last week, with an all-union cast. Like Uncle Dan's act, it also was behind closed doors, and the results, similarly, very doubtful.

OBJECTIVES

The professed aim of the three side-shows is identical: to submit to the President a plan for a substitute NRA.

Involved in such legislation are the vital questions of wage and hour regulation, unionization, child labor, fair trade practices.

But beyond the professed common objectives, all harmony among the three groups ends.

Rivalry and personal feeling are hot and acrid. Each spies on the others. Each, privately, disparages the others. Each is vigorously elbowing the others for the inside track to the President's ear.

When Miss Perkins held a conference with the labor leaders, a staff member of Berry's Council was anonymously present to report on what took place.

When Berry held his recent two-day spectacle, Uncle Dan and Miss Perkins received confidential reports on the meeting—not much of a job, since the conference was public.

When Uncle Dan's Council met recently, as usual behind closely guarded doors, the business moguls devoted considerable time to panning Berry and his group.

the wheel, and I couldn't tell the carburetor from the gas tank."

The average man of 100 years ago had to be handy with tools. He usually had no money to hire repair men, and ordinarily there was no such person within reach. The American man has grown brighter in 100 years, but he does not know nearly so much about tools.

However, the result of the campaign is not to be interpreted as a repudiation of Thomas Jefferson, who was dragged into it involuntarily.

Scientists are men who prolong life so we can have time to pay for all the gadgets they invent.

The BLOODHOUNDS BAY

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN
 COPYRIGHT: RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER 37
 "IT Baffles me..." Graham kept on repeating to Selden as he went along the dim corridor of the Severing crypt wherein the lights had not been turned on. He seemed a broken man, and had no more fight left in him after the bloodhounds had followed the scent of Sylvia's coat to the crypt.
 "Where is Lady Severing?" he asked of James at the gateway. "This place is like a house of the dead."
 "Her ladyship has not yet returned—she went out this morning."
 "She's either gone to see that fellow Colindale, or she knows more about this affair than we think," Graham grumbled. "You'll follow this up, Selden?"
 "I shall do so at once," the detective replied. "We are to have Hucks here as a night watchman shortly."
 Graham wrinkled his brows, puzzling out what the connection could be, but shrugged his shoulders and made for the door.
 "Will you take the car, sir?" James asked Graham politely. "I will phone the chauffeur."
 "I think I will. 'Pon my soul, this incident has upset me. I suppose it's that damned crypt."
 James had gone to the phone, for the garage was with the stables on the other side of the lake.
 "I suppose it is no good asking you, Colonel, to tell me who killed Sir Henry Severing?" Selden said very quietly.
 "Asking me? What the devil do you mean—how? Should I know? I thought it was the job of the police to find that out. What a piece of impertinence!"
 Selden was undisturbed by the outburst. "Why did you want to keep Reid at your house last night? Please don't tell me the tale of his being nervous—he's not that type. Believe me, it is serious."
 The Colonel remained silent, and Selden saw that an inward struggle was going on in his mind. Perhaps he might have spoken, but the sound of the car coming round the drive by the lakeside for him and the bright beams of the headlights seemed to influence his decision. He laughed harshly, and held out his hand quite unexpectedly.
 "I'll think it over—if I can I'll tell you. I believe you are trying to do your best; I only hope you are successful."
 Selden stood and watched him go, heaving a sigh. "What a fool!" he said, not bitterly, but with regret.
 In the meantime James had returned. "If you don't mind, sir, I'll close the doors—I generally do at sundown." James stood beside Selden, deferential as ever, but with an uneasy expression that did not escape Selden.
 "Do so by all means."
 The doors were drawn across, bolted with heavy iron bars, and then James turned a huge key in the lock and put it in his pocket with an air of satisfaction.
 "Feel safer now, eh?"
 "Why yes, sir—there are a number of valuables in the house. If you will excuse me, sir, I'll just go round as I always do to see that the shutters are properly fastened."
 "Quite so, James, but before you do that, will you tell me where I can find Miss Lawrence and the children, or must I investigate the library and the way from there to the organ in the chapel myself?"
 James was struck all of a heap, as the saying goes. He shrank back against the wall and stared at Selden.
 Selden continued: "I'm not a thought-reader or a Sherlock Holmes, but I saw your face when we passed the library door, and it gave the show away. Also, Mrs. Holden told me about that curious organ loft without an entrance, and the hollow panels at the end of the library."
 The staring eyes of the butler left the face of the detective, and a queer smile came to him.
 "I've been puzzling ever since the day of the funeral where I had seen the lady before, and heard her voice—it was clever, sir, if I may say so."
 "Then you will tell me—it's quite safe with me, you know."
 "I intended doing so, sir, but waited till Colonel Graham had gone. You see, Mr. Selden, we were expecting Mr. Reid to come back and I was waiting up, but the car sent a message to say that he was staying at Colonel Graham's house, and that frightened me."
 "Why, James—why were you frightened?" Selden asked insistently.
 The butler showed signs of confusion. "I don't quite know—it was a very dark and cruel night. I told Miss Lawrence, and she was scared at being alone. I left her in her room, but later on she rang for me, and told me she could not be there with the children. She was very much afraid something would happen, and seemed convinced that Mr. Reid would come back, and that something had gone wrong. She put a light in the window, and asked where they could hide for the night. I took them to the old organ loft—there is a room behind the organ, as you guessed."
 "It is a fairly large room, but when the inspector had gone I intended letting Miss Lawrence have the key of the library, and they could go in there." He paused suddenly and a look of horror grew on his face. "But the bloodhounds! They passed the library door, and went to that place."
 "I am afraid I staged that," Selden said with a grin at the astonished butler. "When I heard that Colonel Graham was going to employ the hounds again, I knew that a refusal would be suspicious. So I had the precaution of getting a coat of Miss Lawrence's, which fortunately she had left behind, and trailed it all along the whole way to give a scent so fresh that the hounds could not fail to follow. But the difficulty was that it had to end somewhere, and the gates would not do, for, of course, the scent would go on over the bridge. I had to devise, on the spur of the moment, something so dramatic that the Colonel would have no further ideas of following. I chose this method, and it was successful. I wanted to shake the Colonel into telling me something; but that," he added sadly, "I failed to do."
 "Well, I never," James said, nearly saying something stronger and unsuited to a butler.
 "Now the question is the next move," Selden remarked briskly. "The children can't remain here—that's quite certain."
 "You think there is still danger even here in this hiding-place?"
 "There's danger everywhere. A real getaway to London or elsewhere is impossible, because our friend Hutchins has taken steps and every effort is being made to trace them. I must think it out, but for tonight they had better remain where they are. I shall stay here for the present."
 "Yes, sir; but you will want some food."
 "I think I will wait for Lady Severing—she can't be long, and I want to talk to her."
 "Very good—I'll lay for two, then. You'll excuse me, sir, but I must go and see about getting some food for Miss Lawrence and the children."
 Selden watched him go, and then walked into the central court, where he sat down on the old seat by the chapel wall.
 Colonel Graham's guess was correct. Lady Severing, distracted at the disappearance of the children, apparently with the conviction of their governess, and by the fact that Reid on whom she had least for support was in bed with fever, had sought the help of the one man whom she thought she could trust. She phoned Eric Colindale and arranged to meet him at the market town of Grinfold. She would not take the car, for even the chauffeur might talk. She boarded a bus, and waited at the "Wheatstear" in the square.
 Colindale already showed signs of his altered conditions and unrestricted life. His face had a bloated appearance, which the hard life in the open air had kept under control. He was none too pleased at being summoned back from London, as Hilda had been afraid to tell him the reason on the telephone.
 They sat in a small room facing the market square, while he listened to her story at first with bored impatience, but later with interest. His vanity was flattered by her obvious trust in his judgment, and her distress. The pose of a strong man suited him admirably. Hilda had found that she could not manage without him, and when in trouble depended on his sound advice and his good strong arm. Such thoughts coursed their way through his mind as he listened.
 "What do you want me to do?" he asked at the conclusion of the recital.
 "I want to get out of it all, Eric," she said imploringly. "That house will kill me, I'm certain, and now that the children are gone I don't know what to do, because if something has really happened to them the allowance will, of course, stop, and we shan't have anything to live on."
 He hadn't thought of that—this was serious. Already he was in lack of funds and had meant to ask Hilda for money.
 "It would be madness to leave just now, Hilda. In any case, the children can't have gone far; we don't live in a kidnapping country, and who in the world is going to murder them? It's stupid—like the babes in the wood with a wicked uncle thrown in."
 "The detectives seem quite useless, Eric, and what is worse, they don't seem to be making any effort to discover the murderer."

World At A Glance

Although Attorney General Homer S. Cummings may "pooh-pooh" charges against his G-men, the fact remains that feelings of considerable hostility to the justice department's bureau of investigation exist in the ranks of other police and inquisitorial organizations, municipal, statewide and national.

The attorney general denies, indeed, that he has received complaints concerning the G-men's methods from "any responsible official."

However, he must have noticed a bitter denunciation from Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine of New York City City of the G-men's recently spectacular fashion of capturing Public Enemy Harry Brunette in the metropolis. It would seem as if Commissioner Valentine might fairly classify as a "responsible official."

IMPORTANT TESTIMONY

Concurring, too, with Valentine, is Commissioner John J. BULDE, under direct command of Director J. Edgar Hoover, started a fire in a stylish Manhattan apartment house, in effecting Brunette's capture. Neither Valentine nor McElligott contended that the capture was undesirable. What they did assert was the pyrotechnics were dangerously unnecessary.

Is the combined testimony of Valentine and McElligott too irresponsible for consideration?

VIOLENCE PROTESTED

It will be recalled that there have been past subdued growls from local police chiefs relative to what they described as the G-men's needlessly violent system of "bumping off" public enemies in their various jurisdictions.

The local police assert, in each instance, that THEY have done all the preliminary detective work, have "spotted" the suspects and have been just on the point of arresting them—whereupon the G-men, getting wind of what was coming and desirous to grab all the credit, have jumped into the respective situations with indiscreet haste, shooting up neighborhoods, starting fires and raising heck generally.

Where the local functionaries would, they say, have made quiet arrests, they accuse the G-men of of having, deliberately, staged battles.

MORE CHARGES

State police have leveled a similar charge against the federales.

Federal bureaus of anti-G antecedents have done so likewise. The postoffice inspection service is one of them. In reality post-office inspectors are detectives. Their story is that they would have fixed responsibility for numerous violations of the postal regulations much sooner but for the G-men's extraneous bungling—after which, the malefactors having been identified, the G-men have represented that THEY did it.

DEPARTMENTS CLASH

It also is of recent record that the treasury's secret service, suspicious of the justice department's, started an investigation of the latter (one bunch of federal investigators investigating another bunch.)

We know this because two of the treasury's investigators, caught at it, were demoted.

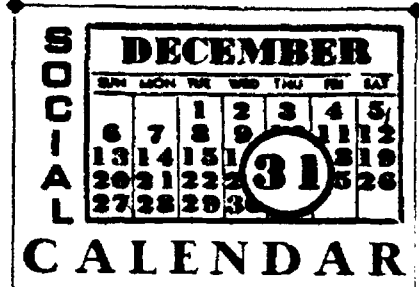

The justice department, forcing demotion of the rival department's investigators, certainly gained a justice departmental victory. Still, the clash doesn't seem to imply harmony.

RAIN MAY SOAK HOLLYWOOD BOWL, HINDERING ROSE BOWL ELEVENS

1936 TO SEE EAST AND WEST FIGHT FOR HONOR

Field Expected to be Wet Despite Good Drainage; Protection Missing

COACHES WANT DRY DAY

Both Squads Have Plenty of Power in Land Attack

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 31 — (UP) — For the first time since their arrival in California, the Rose Bowl football teams of Pittsburgh and Washington were encamped in the same city today and both had a common worry — rain.

Heavy rains, which started last Friday and stopped on Tuesday, resumed again yesterday, soaking the turf of the huge concrete bowl where a capacity crowd of 87,196 persons — largest in history — will see these teams battle tomorrow in the 20th game of the series. With the forecast for more rain today or tomorrow, chances are the field might be as bad or even worse than it was in 1934 when Columbia walloped Stanford in a sea of mud.

RESERVE QUINT WINS EDGE OVER OHIO UNIVERSITY

COLUMBUS, Dec. 31 — (UP) — Ohio University, the top-ranked Buckeye conference quintet, today had been dropped from the rapidly thinning ranks of the state's undefeated basketball teams.

The Bobcats, easy victors in three contests played prior to Christmas, were downed in a hectic battle at Cleveland last night 43 to 42 after two overtime periods.

In the other games on last night's program, Marshall's roving five from the Buckeye ranks downed Newark University 60 to 43 and Ohio State took an overtime contest from Southern California 39 to 37.

The Ohio U.-Western Reserve battle was the outstanding court battle played in the state this season.

With only nine minutes of the contest remaining Ohio U. held a 32 to 22 lead, and then Reserve became a literal ball of fire.

With Paul Bates, a forward who swung into the pivot position and Dick McClure, substitute guard, setting the pace, the Red Cats knotted the score at 32 all as the regular playing time was up.

towering peaks which pour mountain rains down into the valley, has no tarpaulin protection. It has an elaborate drainage system, but it has been so thoroughly doused in the last week that at least two good days of hot sun would be needed to bake it out thoroughly.

Just when a heavy field would aid, no one knows because each team has plenty of straight ahead power. But the tip-off on the situation is seen in the fact that both coaches, Jimmy Phelan of Washington and Jock Sutherland of Pittsburgh, are hoping for a dry field. That means each probably has some razzle-dazzle up their sleeves which would be dangerous to use if the going is sloppy.

Betting on the outcome continued in the vicinity of even money. A heavy field, which would probably result in a battle of powerful lines and a single break play deciding the match, will be certain to keep the wagering at even money.

LASH, GLICKMAN RUN

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 — (UP) — Donald R. Lash, University of Indiana senior, will participate in the Knights of Columbus annual indoor track and field meet here Jan. 9. He will compete in the 3,000 meters special race for the Conklin trophy. Marty Glickman, Syracuse, sprinter, also has accepted an invitation to run.

QUARTER MILLION TO SEE GAMES IN SEVEN BOWLS

NEW YORK, Dec. 31 — (UP) — More than a quarter-million football fans will crowd into seven stadiums tomorrow to witness the 1936 post-season "bowl" games.

The Rose Bowl contest at Pasadena will attract the largest gathering with the Universities of Washington and Pittsburgh playing before a capacity audience of 85,000.

The annual charity game between all stars of the east and west at San Francisco at Kezar stadium will draw about 50,000.

The Sugar Bowl game between Louisiana State and Santa Clara at New Orleans may be outdrawn by the Cotton Bowl affair between Texas Christian and Marquette at Dallas.

The Miami, Fla., stadium has been enlarged to accommodate 17,000 for the Orange bowl game between Mississippi State and Duquesne.

Havana's Bacardi bowl will attract more than 17,000 to see Auburn and Villanova and Jesse Owens will attempt to break his own world's running broad jump record between the halves.

With the 12,000 expected at El Paso's Cotton Bowl game between Hardin-Simmons and Texas Mines, the total "bowl" attendance should run more than 268,000.

EMERY QUINTET WINS 27-21 AT WILLIAMSPORT

The Emery Club won a rough and hard-fought basketball game Wednesday evening from the Williamsport Ex-Hi quintet on the Deercreek township floor. The was 27-21 with nearly all the scoring being done in the first half, which ended 20-17.

About This And That In Many Sports

Morris Named Best

Selection of Glenn Morris, Colorado athlete, as the proper person to receive the Sullivan award for the outstanding performance in athletics in 1936 may be okeh, but again it may not be. — If any athlete ever outdid Jesse Owens, at least since Jim Thorpe, then his name is not known to the janitor. — Thorpe, too, was ousted from his honors by a charge of professionalism. — The reason Morris won the honor, though, can plainly be seen in the wording of part of the rules governing the award: "To the athlete, who by his performance, example and influence as an amateur and as a man, has done most during the year to advance the cause of sportsmanship." * * *

Dispute-Professionalism

The fact that Owens disputed with the A.A.U., and its Mr. Fore completing his schooling, Brundage, and because he became a professional athlete, took him from the title class, it is reported. — How, then, could he be rated in second place if he could not be considered for first? * * *

Two Boys on Coast

At least two Cincinnati youths will be in the stands New Year's day when Pittsburgh and Washington fight for the Rose Bowl title. — They are John Griffith and Billy Kellstadt, both of whom are attending El Centro college, California. * * *

Long Island Bumped

Stanford university cagers, who are sweeping up and down the nation knocking off good cage teams, won an important one Wednesday evening from Long Island university. — Stanford is scheduled to meet Western Reserve's fast crew in Cleveland soon. — The Reserve outfit bumped Ohio U., 43-42, in two overtime periods Wednesday night. * * *

New League Formed

Columbus high schools seem a little bit tougher this year, although East lost to Columbus Academy. — Columbus outfits usually go down to one-sided defeats on all foreign courts. — Another tough athletic league has been formed to include Ironton, Portsmouth, Springfield, Hamilton, Norwood, and Middletown. * * *

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

If you're one of the hundreds of millions of movie fans who believe that Shirley Temple is the cutest, sweetest thing that ever lived — and who isn't — you belong down at the Cliftona theatre, where "Little Miss Marker," starring the dimpled darling closes tonight.

Shirley is supported in Damon Runyon's story of Broadway and the race-tracks by an exceptional cast, headed by Adolphe Menjou and Charles Bickford, and including Lynne Overman, Frank McGlynn, Sr., and Sam Hardy.

"Little Miss Marker" is a story of hard-boiled racing followers — the "tough guys" who use an adopted shell of would-be hardness to cover their actual sentimentality. Shirley plays the role of "collateral," deposited by her father as security for a bet, and then orphaned when he shoots himself after his horse loses.

Jack Holt in "North of Nome" completes this double feature program.

AT THE CIRCLE

Madge Evans thinks Leap Year should come every year!

The lovely Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player said so in an interview on the set of her new picture with Franchot Tone, "Exclusive Story," now showing at the Circle theatre.

"Leap Year was devised a long time ago. Girls who hadn't been asked for five years were then given the chance to pop the question themselves.

But the world has changed since then. Girls have asserted themselves and taken the initiative with success in other things, so why not in romantic affairs?

"Yes," she smiles, "I think Leap Year should begin every New Year's."

AT THE GRAND

Hollywood is a Paradise of paradoxes. David Oliver, for sixteen years an ace newsreel cameraman, has permanently stepped from the rear to the front of the cameras, his second role being in Universal's "The Girl on the Front Page," which opened at the Grand theatre on Wednesday.

Reginald Owen, who portrays the blackmailing butler in the same offering, is a screen actor of many years standing, with a strong penchant for amateur photography. The pair, Owen and Oliver, became deeply interested in camera discussion and finally drew into their talks Basil Inman, staff photographer of a Los Angeles daily who was covering a studio assignment.

GAME ONLY AT NO TRUMPS

UNLESS DECLARER holds at least five trumps in a major suit, or six trumps in a minor suit, or unless partner insists upon the suit call, scattered strength in side suits often makes no trumps a safer call than a trump declaration. This was the case with the following deal. It appeared in a duplicate game, in which every strong East and West pair played no trumps. The less seasoned players either hid game in hearts or diamonds, and went down.

Hand:

♠ Q J 8 3	♥ A 10 6 4 2	♦ None	♣ A 10 7 3
♠ K Q J	♥ A 8 5 3	♦ K 8 6	♣ A
♠ A 9 8 4 2	♥ K 6 5 3	♦ A	♣ A
♠ K 10 4	♥ J 7	♦ J 10 7	♣ J 9 5 4 2

I think that every West player made an opening call of 1-Diamond. Every East player either hid 1-Spade, supported diamonds or made a tentative shift to no trumps. I think that the best overcall of 1-Diamond is 2-No Trumps, as East is ready to strongly support the opening call, assist a secondary bid of either major suit or play no trumps at game.

Of course there is the simplest sort of play for game at no trumps by just taking top honors: 1 trick in spades, 4 in hearts, 2 in diamonds and 2 in clubs, or 9 tricks total, before letting defenders in.

Declarers of diamonds had a rude shock, finding four trumps in South's hand, obliging them to lose two diamond tricks, as well as either one club or one spade. The opening lead invariably was either a spade or a club, as would be expected.

At no trumps the opening lead was a club, giving declarer two sure stops to the suit. Had declarer had to lose no diamond tricks with that suit the call, there would have been a grand slam at diamonds, or one trick more than at no trumps. Had there been only a single diamond trick to lose there would have been 5-odd either at the suit or at no trumps, provided the opening lead was a spade against the suit make. At diamonds, with only one trump trick to lose, an opening lead of clubs would have yielded a small slam, as declarer then could have discarded his losing spade on East's fourth heart, and ruffed a single loser in clubs.

Declarers of hearts ran into even tougher luck than the bidders of the other red suit. Not one of them made more than 4-odd. Two went down two tricks. Here again as a diamonds, the necessary loss of two tricks in diamonds prevented declarer from forcing North to ruff that suit often enough to lose only two trump tricks and a single spade trick. The minor red suit was the weak link at all calls made.

BURGLARS OBTAIN MONEY IN TWO BUSINESS HOUSES WEDNESDAY NIGHT

PRODUCE HOUSE AND FITZPATRICK OFFICE LOOTED

Between $13 and $14 Taken From Steele's Desk; Pennies Stolen

Two local business places, Steele's produce house and Fitzpatrick's printery, were burglarized Wednesday night.

Dwight L. Steele reported between $13 and $14 in change was taken from the cash drawer at his place of business. The building was entered through a rear door and the top of a desk pried loose to reach the cash drawer.

George Fitzpatrick, proprietor of the printery, was unable to learn how the burglar entered his establishment. No windows or doors could be found unlocked but a latch turned on the front door indicated the burglar had attempted to leave by that door.

About 300 pennies were missing from the cash register.

Police believe the same thieves entered both places.

It was shown in Lancaster Tuesday evening. Wednesday morning, Walker Baughman, manager of the Grand, learned there was no direct way to get it to Circleville.

The film was placed on the Chesapeake & Ohio and sent to Athens. It went to Chillicothe via Baltimore and Ohio, thence to Circleville on the Norfolk and Western. The trip covered 123 miles and required seven hours and 40 minutes.

drove away from his beautiful home, overlooking Puget sound, in a battered old car. Several officers accompanied him. Where they went was not known, but there were reports he had been instructed to use a car of "special" type when he kept his rendezvous with the abductor.

There were other mysterious trips from the home. Close friends and relatives came and went at all hours through the night. Lights blazed in all rooms. The activity was the greatest since Charles was taken.

Reporters, who have watched the house and the Mattsons constantly since Sunday night, noted that members of the family were more cheerful and that the tense atmosphere of yesterday was gone.

May Be At Home

Some persons believed Charles already had been released and was slipped into the house last night. There was no confirmation of this rumor, however, and the general belief was that he would be released later in the day.

Despite their cheerful attitude members of the family maintained secrecy on all phases of the case and refused to discuss the possibility the boy's safe return was assured.
